

Who am I?

I am Dipto Barman, a dedicated member of the PWO and a passionate PhD researcher at the School of Computer Science and Statistics. My commitment to the cause of PhD researchers and PGRs is unwavering. I advocate for the full realisation of our basic rights within Trinity College, acknowledging the pivotal role we play in its academic heartbeat.

What will I do?

As a candidate for the Quality Committee, my focus is to elevate the standards of support and recognition for PhD researchers and PGRs. My agenda is shaped by an unyielding support for the principles that underpin academic excellence and integrity. My primary goal is to stand, strongly and entirely, for workers' rights, maternity and paternity leave, sick leave, a living wage, and non-EU and disabled rights for every single PhD and PGR in Trinity.

We need to stand up – always and in every part of Trinity – against discrimination and for our rights. If I am elected, I will stand for one of Trinity's most neglected communities – PhD researchers.

Why PWO?

The PWO is the only organisation that is made by PGRs for PGRs. Though PGRs are the teachers, markers, invigilators, and researchers that drive most of Trinity's education, we are not even given the dignity of a minimum wage.

By standing with me and with the PWO, you stand for our basic rights and for human dignity. Stand with us, and win with us!
